01 02 03 04

Four quiet signals that a practice website can be trusted.

From NN/g's research on web credibility

01

Design quality

“The first step to garnering trust is to make your site appear legitimate and professional.”

Source: Aurora Harley, NN/g (2016)

02

Upfront disclosure

“On the web, like in real life, people appreciate when sites are upfront with all information that relates to the customer experience.”

Source: Aurora Harley, NN/g (2016)

03

Comprehensive, correct, current

"Thorough information related to the business exudes expertise and authority."

Source: Aurora Harley, NN/g (2016)

04

Connected to the rest of the web

"Linking to these outside sources shows you are transparent and confident about your service."

Source: Aurora Harley, NN/g (2016)

And the small things count.

“Typos, broken links, and other mistakes quickly degrade credibility and communicate an overall lack of attention to detail.”

Source: Aurora Harley, NN/g (2016)